Last evening a meeting of the grocers was held, when; it was declared that they courted investigation and were prepared for it. They wanted a Dominion-wide investigation, so that their business could be put upon a legitimate basis. Some of them complained of price cutting, but few people custide the trade complain of that. It may be that the grocers are mis-understood. The investigation should bring out the facts at any rate, whether or not it furnishes a remedy.

THE PAPER INDUSTRY

pulp and paper industry of this ry is one, we think, that lends o Government ownership, as the aterial is mostly in the hands Government. The present pulp per mills receive the great bulk r material from the public doof their material from the public do-nain, and are dependent upon the foverment for their supplies. The represent situation in the paper indus-tyr is immical to the best interests of the country. The question of the soldiers' civic assurance or relief was thrashed out again at a meeting last evening of the Board of Control and interested organizations. The result was that Sergt, John Anderson was empowered to canvasar those entitled to the money to find out what disposition of it they favored. It was made clear that promises made on the recruiting platforms did not hold good, that the committee was guided by the city by-law endorsed by the Legislature. Then I walked up to the door exactly as she had done, but it dight open the width of a crack for me! I surveyed the carved buds and twigs of its framework. Not a single spot had been robbed of its color by the pressure of fingers. It was most bewildering. I dared not undertake the making of the rope which was to help the ranchers imprisoned below me. I dared not speak to them until after the old woman had brought the foing, up saddenly, I saw thrys before me. Back of her was Donna Camilla.

"Don't come in! Go back!" I called out. But Chrys didn't understand. Perhaps she was under a hypnotic spell. She came straight toward me holding out both hands and smilling amiably. Donna Camilla set down a huge basket and diasppeared.

I put my arms about Chrys and cried. She kept on smiling like a little child. She was a child—a woman without a soul. "The afrain dry lucks is changing," I hought. "I' could have one wish coins true—and only one—A know what it would be in the wish for Prince of marked prince Charming was already on his way?".
